Introduction to the Workshop

In this year's annual program, the ITA will explore the most important challenges that arise from disputes where international arbitration operates in a complex web of multiple proceedings and multiple parties. In a series of lectures, debates, panels and mock scenarios, leading international dispute resolution experts from around the world will seek to identify the real life problems caused by such complex procedures and propose viable solutions as to how they can be mitigated or resolved. With active involvement from all participants, the Workshop aims to add an important voice to the most pressing issues facing international arbitration today.

9:10 Keynote: Coordination or Chaos (.5 hr)

International arbitration proceedings frequently take place in parallel with other proceedings, before other arbitral tribunals or domestic courts, dealing with a similar or sometimes almost identical subject matter. Professor Gaillard's keynote speech will explore the notions of comity, lis pendens, anti-suit injunctions and res judicata as possible instruments of coordination among national courts and international arbitral tribunals. More generally, it will address the complex web of relationships between national courts and arbitral tribunals, and two or more arbitral tribunals, both in the context of commercial and investment treaty arbitration.

- Keynote Speaker: Prof. Emmanuel Gaillard, Shearman & Sterling, Institut d'études politiques de Paris, Paris

9:40 Comments on the Keynote (.5 hr)

A view from the perspective of the arbitral institutions, arbitrators, counsel and the industry on the issues at stake in international commercial arbitration related to natural resources.

- Ricky Diwan QC, Essex Court Chambers, London
- Jean E. Kalicki, Independent Arbitrator, New York/Washington, D.C.

10:15 Mock: Evidence and Equality of Arms in Multi-Arbitration Proceedings (1.25 hr)

Parties may face significant evidentiary issues in the context of multi-arbitration proceedings. These issues arise particularly when evidence poses different privilege or confidentiality issues in proceedings in which one party appoints the same arbitrator to multiple arbitrations. This session presents a mock procedural hearing to resolve a document disclosure dispute to showcase how such an issue might arise in a case and how a tribunal might approach its resolution.

11:50 Coordinating Multiple Dispute Resolution Processes (1.0 hr)

Multiple dispute resolution processes are increasingly being used, either successively or simultaneously, to resolve today's disputes, making for an ever-increasing web of actors and decisions. In the commercial sphere, the advent of multi-tiered dispute resolution clauses has, for instance, brought new coordination challenges to the fore. As for the public sphere, States are increasingly building their capacity and willingness to engage in various types of dispute resolution procedures. This session seeks to grapple with coordination issues both from the perspective of parties and from the perspective of mediators, experts and arbitrators.

A Conversation with

Von Wobeser y Sierra, S.C., Mexico City

With

Andrea K. Bjorklund

L. Yves Fortier Chair in International Arbitration and International Commercial Law

This interview is the latest in a series organized by the ITA Academic Council to record the evolution of modern international arbitration in the words of those who have led it.

Sponsored by:

2:30 Res judicata Issues in Commercial and Investment Arbitration (1.0 hr)

One of the oldest and key problems for the predictability of international dispute resolution arises when multiple tribunals are seized of disputes arising from the same underlying facts or the same tribunal is seized of successive close but not strictly identical requests by the same parties. This problem is compounded by the consensual nature of international arbitration as opposed to court litigation: if parties consent to have this arbitral tribunal resolve this dispute, under what circumstances can the tribunal decline to exercise this jurisdiction on the basis that another or the same tribunal has already made a related decision involving the same or related parties? The panel will review traditional conceptions of the res judicata doctrine and similar doctrines such as claims preclusion in commercial and investment treaty arbitration, discuss how they are applied by arbitral tribunals in practice and whether refinements, simplifications or radically new approaches are needed.

3:30 Coffee Break >

3:50 Multiple Notions of ‘Party’ in Investor-State Arbitration (1.0 hr)

In investor-State arbitration, the notion of what constitutes a “party” is becoming ever more complex. From the investor’s perspective, different treaty mechanisms and arbitral jurisprudence have been seen to both expand and contract the definition of a qualified investor. From the State’s perspective, while it is often viewed from the outside as a monolith, it may not actually be so unified internally for purposes of defending its interests in international arbitration. This panel will explore how these multiple notions of “party” manifest themselves in investor-State disputes and how they may impact investment law going forward.

Introduction and Moderator:

- Erica Stein, Workshop Co-Chair

Speakers:

- Prof. Ursula Kriebaum, University of Vienna, Vienna
- Patrick Pearsall, Jenner & Block, Washington, DC
- Dr. Hanno Wehland, Lenz & Staehelin, Zurich

4:50 Debate: Paying the Same Dollar Twice – Addressing the Risk of Double Recovery in Related Proceedings (.75 hr)

One of the thorniest issues to arise from pending related proceedings is the risk that a party could be doubly compensated for the same harm, or have to pay double compensation that it fairly owes to other project participants due to the uncoordinated nature of arbitral proceedings. This panel will directly address this remedies question both in the context of purely commercial proceedings and in the context of the interlocking commercial and investor-state proceedings. The audience will participate in the discussion by means of live voting after exchanges.
